

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE
Ashby	Arboretum and Fruticetum (1838) has the following: “In Northamptonshire, in the churchyard at Ashby, is a very large yew tree; but it is not easy to take its dimensions, as the stem is buried in mould up to the branching off of its chief branches.”
Barnwell	Venerable churchyard yews
Castle Ashby	“Magnificent yew outside the gate” – no further information
Dallington	“4 tall yews line the path...” to the church
Deanshanger	Wide walks of clipped yew – presumably churchyard
Dingley	Yew hedge – no further information
Duston	Ancient churchyard yews
Finedon	6 fine old churchyard yews
Hinton-in-the-Hedges	Dense leafy hedge – not clear whether this is churchyard or not
Kirby Hall nr. Gretton	“An old yew hedge and ancient yews” recorded in The Shell Gardens Book of 1964
Newton	St Faith – a fine yew.
Rockingham Castle	A 400 year old hedge.
Southwick	Yews by the churchyard
Wicken	Wide walks of clipped yews in the form of a great St Andrews Cross – no further details

MILTON KEYNES
Stoke Goldington	Digby’s Walk (Gayhurst House) is said to contain “Ancient Yews.”
Tattenhoe	A church reputed to be ‘in the middle of a field’ with yew trees dating from the time of first church building at the site (1200s)