

WORCESTERSHIRE

Badsey	The Old Vicarage was demolished in 1971 and 10 executive homes were built in a cul-de-sac on its half acre plot. Its name is Allsebrook Gardens. The vicarage garden was used for fetes and had a big yew tree.”
Castlemorton	St Gregory: in 1924 there was “a yew tree to the SE of the chancel.”
Chaceley	A yew tree on the north side of the church (1924) – described in British History Online
Conderton	Yew Tree Inn with a yew outside
Cradley	1874: “In a rocky wood at Cradley, I not long since counted 30 Yews growing.”
Croome	This is presumably Croome Court. A reference in Arboretum and Fruticetum (1838) is: “40 years old, it is 30 ft high, the diameter of the trunk 1 ft 6 in., and that of the head 20ft.”
Cropthorne	Churchyard: A fine old spreading yew.
Eldersfield	In 1924 there was “a yew tree on the south side of the church.”
Fladbury	Tall Yews – probably churchyard
Hadzor House	Arboretum and Fruticetum (1838) records a yew as follows: “In Worcestershire, at Hadzor House, it is 40 ft high, and has a trunk 7 ft in circumference.”
Holme Lacy	An extraordinary hedge
Kidderminster	Yew Tree Pub - yew with girth reckoned to be 15ft.
Overbury	A fine old yew – probably churchyard