

KENT
Andrew's Wood, nr Shoreham	The wood is a quarter of a mile east of the roundabout junction of the A21 and A224. "Old yews and beeches" are described as indicating the former character of this wood.
Bearstead Green	A garden yew with an age of 300/500 reported.
Blean	Venerable Yews – probably churchyard.
Chevening	On Pilgrims way near Sevenoaks/Bromley road when approached from Chevening are "a group of magnificent old yew trees". This in 1911 - Julia Narey.
Coldred	According to Mee (1936) there was a "yew in the churchyard, ancient, hollow and dying." We found no trace but I have since been informed that the yew is on the other side of the road that runs alongside the church.
Copton nr Ospringe	From 1829 History of the County of Kent. THE SHYREWAY, or lane called Portway, otherwise Porter's, or Selgrave lane, leading from Copton, to Whitehill, in Ospringe, seems to separate this moiety from the other, on the south side of this lane. At the entrance of the same, adjoining Copton, under a yew tree, is a hole, where the court manor is called, which spot appears to have been the site of the ancient manor house. The main manor of Copton (perhaps 'the settlement at the head of the valley'), included Ham Farm, near Holly Shore. Oldest in the parish, the manor house is unusual in being flint-built rather than timber-framed. It goes back to the 14th century or earlier, though thanks to later alterations and additions its west wing, visible from the Ashford Road, looks Georgian. A listed building, it has an unusual early scissors-brace roof. It is thought that King Stephen's wife Matilda may have stayed here to monitor construction of the new Abbey she and he founded at Faversham in 1148.
Fairlawne	1913 reference to a "church among ancient yews". Fairlawne seems to be an estate, bordering the villages of Plaxtol, Shipbourne and Dunk's Green, all of which have churches. A photo of Shipbourne suggests there are yews here.
Harvel	"A wood entirely of yew trees ...the address is Badgers Wood, Heron Hill Road, near Meopham.the road is an ancient track only really suitable for four-wheel drive, although excepting the steepest parts, it is regularly used by local people. The road cuts straight across two valleys, the wood being at the far end on the left-hand side and forms the boundary of a huge field. Easier access though is from Harvel village, (down a farm track next to Rabbits Corner, a thatched cottage outside the village). It would then be on the right hand side at the end."
Hever	Thousands of feet of yew hedge
Medway – Bluebell Hill	Yew woodland
Otham	Archaeologia Cantiana by the Kent Archaeological Society in its publication of 1904 records that the ancient yew tree in Otham churchyard was almost destroyed by fire 14 February 1901.
Tonbridge	Yew Tree Farm – a yew of 700 years has been described.
Trosley Towers country park	NE of Sevenoaks. Shattered yew and old yews described on the Pilgrims Way.
West Farleigh	1852 In the churchyard here are some of the finest yew trees that are to be seen in England.
West Langdon	An 'ancient' yew has been described – presumably churchyard.

Withyam	In Sylva Florifera by Henry Phillips 1823 is the following tantalising information: “Several fine old [yew] trees are to be seen on some sandy rocks about two miles from Withyam, and five from Tunbridge.
