

1998: This male yew grows ESE of the church. Meredith described it as 'many new stems obliterating original trunk' in The Sacred Yew (1994). I counted 15 of these new stems, rising not only as peripheral growth of a bole that disappeared long ago, but also filling the central area. It is a most extraordinary sight.

