

HERTFORDSHIRE

Albury	Churchyard: Yews with known planting dates in the 1850s.
Ashwell	Churchyard: Yew with known planting date of 1718, planted to mark the place where "John Larken would later be buried."
Brent Pelham	A story of legend tells of a giant, Piers Shonks, who lived on an island in Shonk's Moat, Peppsall Field. The dragon he slew had a lair beneath a yew in Great Peppsall Field. Since the moat and fields exist, is it possible that there might be an old yew there as well?
Hexton	Dark yews surround the church.
Hunstonbury Cophthall	5m girthed yew in grounds of private house. I have not been able to find this location, though there is a Hursdonbury, near Ware.
Hyde Hall	A circle of yews somewhere along the drive.
Shenley Hill	120-150 yews – house and gardens now owned by business, so not sure of access.
St Albans	17ft girthed yew at St Michael's church – Roman Forum site. Other descriptions are: "When you get to the Abbey turn right and walk round it with the building to your left. Follow the path round the Chapter House and continue walking past a large old Yew Tree." Another states: "In Sumpter Yard by the Abbey, you can see an extremely old yew."
Throcking	Spreading churchyard yew
Wall Hall Ampitheatre	Wall Hall College is near Radlett. 60/70 yews girthing 8 to 11ft. At the lip of the basin the largest with a girth of about 14ft.
Woodland sites	The following may have yews: Box Lane, near Boxmoor Hill, Hemel Hampstead, Ramacre Wood, Hanging Wood, Hay Wood, Bury Wood.
