

Revd. Williams painting of 1786 is held by Shropshire Archives, who have kindly allowed it to be reproduced here. It shows the largest of the 5 yews in Kenley's churchyard, an ancient female of which large sections of the old sapwood trunk could still be seen. It grows in the wall to the west of the church and is seen here in the two photos at the foot of the page, taken in 1998. A drop of 8' to the field below made it impossible to confirm Meredith's girth of 28' published in The Sacred Yew.

A veteran yew, with a girth of about 18', is number 3 on the plan. It is seen above right in 2012.
