

The 1909 Little Guides to Monmouth recorded 'some fine old yew trees much decayed'. In 1986 Revd J.Daryll Evans in The Churchyard Yews of Gwent noted '4 large stumps of yew to the north of the church'.

The only large yew still growing here is this tall elegant female ESE of the church. A substantial internal stem fills part of its hollow. Foliage was a healthy green with plentiful new leaf growth. The photos show how quickly ivy can cover a tree if left unchecked.

In 2000 I recorded girths of 23' 3" at 3' and 22' 0" at 5'.

In 2017 Peter Norton measured at a height of about 4' 6" where some nails had been unnecessarily hammered into the tree. He recorded a girth of 22' 4".

Photos: left and centre: Tim Hills 1998: right: Geoff Garlick 2005