

2002: This is a fragment of a once much larger girthed male tree. At some time it was cut off at A, and from here several new branches have developed. Twisted internal stems can be clearly seen in what would once have been the hidden centre of the tree. Girth of this fragment was 15' 10" at 1'.