

3 yews grow in a line on the south side of the church. In 2004 the largest of these was covered in ivy, with elder blocking access to the bole. It was evident that part of the tree had disintegrated leaving bits of stump up to 3' high. In the hollow could be seen a large internal stem which now forms part of the yew's main branch. Girth was swelled by ivy but I recorded 15' 11" at 1'.

In 2016 Paul Wood, who has provided the photographs, recorded a girth of 16' 2" at 1'.

© Tim Hills/Paul Wood - Ancient Yew Group - 2019