

2004: Two yews grow on steeply sloping ground. The largest is number 1 on the plan, south of the church. It has a hollow on its east side that reveals 2 internal stems. Girth was above 17'.

The smaller female, number 2 on the plan, had a girth of above 13'. It is bulgy beneath the point where its bole breaks into many branches at a height of about 6'.

photos - Paul Wood - 2015

