

The church was consecrated in the 11th century. St Ishon's well is found at the foot of the hill below the church.

2 yews were listed in the 1970 Brecon Yew Survey, with girths of 21' and 16'. All that is left of the smaller yew is this stump, close to the south porch.

The survivor grows NNW of the church. It has an 8' bole, from which rise two substantial branches. Although its girth in 2000 was only 15' 10" close to the ground, it is almost certainly the larger of the Brecon Survey trees, which would have been measured in 1970 at a height of 5'.
