

I learned of this tree through a Google alert, which read: 'There is a beautiful and ancient yew tree in the grave yard of St Mary'.

2009: Here is a fine horse shoe shaped hollow male yew with an internal stem, and two major branches developing at a height of about 8'. Ivy was taking hold and it was suggested that it should be removed. The yew grows SE of the church and had a girth of about 15'.

Peter Norton 2015: Ivy has been cleared allowing access to this tree. I measured at 1' from the ground, and including a small piece of remnant trunk recorded a girth of 13' 5".

© Tim Hills/Peter Norton - Ancient Yew Group - 2019