

In the Nottingham Graveyard Guide of 1911 we are told that in Greasley 'a fine old yew graces the neighbourhood of the disused south porch'.

2009: Here is a small girthed yew in the region of 10', quite hollow with pieces of decaying wood showing that it has been larger girthed, perhaps as much as 14'/15'. There was too much ivy for detailed examination. The male tree is tall and narrow.
