

A church was recorded here in the Domesday survey and it is thought likely that an earlier wattle church stood upon this site.

1998: The circular wall around this female yew has been gradually pushed down by the expanding tree (right). Its bole separates into 2 main growth areas at about 6'.

Many branches, including three large limbs grow around the edge of the tree, while many more have been removed. The tree appeared to be in good health.

Girth was 26' 5" close to the ground.

2012: Fourteen years later Peter Norton visited the site and noted that lower spray has increased on this tree. He recorded a girth of 26' 11" close to the ground. Photos below.
