

The old male yew grows on the north side of the church. It is hollow with internal growth, and divides at 10' into two main growth areas, one thick girthed and rising, the other dividing into many branches and leaning. In 1995 O. Johnson recorded a girth of 456cm (15' 3") at 0.4m. In 2013 I recorded 15' 4" at 1'.

In the church it states that an expert has aged the tree, giving it a planting date of 1650. The tree is undoubtedly considerably older than this.
