

2007: The yew grows in the private grounds of Upton Castle, between the house and the chapel (formerly Upton parish church). The chapel can be visited as part of a tour of Upton Castle Gardens which are open to the public at certain times of the year.

The yew is of striking appearance with a fluted red trunk. Recent work carried out has seen the removal of many branches. Owen Johnson considers the tree to be 'perhaps contemporaneous with the one growing in nearby Nash'. Girth: 16' 6" at 3'
