

2004: This yew grows SW of the church. It is difficult to know how it developed, but it did not give me the impression of being a fragment of something that was once much much larger.

From about 8' upwards it divides into 2 hollowed out trunks. Rusty chains and metal wire were attempting to keep them from further separation. The whole structure leans away from the church and was propped up.

Girth 11' 6" at 1'.
