

2015: Of four yews found in the churchyard the most significant grows at the west entrance. While its present girth is 15' 2", measured over a thin layer of ivy at its narrowest point 14" above the ground, this has been a larger girthed yew. It has a south facing hollowed centre in the horse shoe shape with a section missing and a lack of major branches. The tree is a female and during the visit on 31/10/2015 was inundated with arils.

The three smaller yews here are a twin trunked yew with a girth of 13' 3", a yew with a girth of 11' 8" and a third with a girth of about 6'.

Also noted were 39 yews of various age in the village, the majority having a girth of around 10' to 11'.
