

A male yew grows close to the SW corner of the church. It grows on a mound, and leans slightly to the south. At about 8' the bole straightens with a flurry of twiggy growth above which rise several branches. Though of small girth it has already become a horse shoe shaped hollow. Inside the hollow, internal growth can be clearly seen.

